SEEKS REMOVAL OF WARDEN

Wheeler Would Oust Remainder of "Ohio Crowd."

MAKES DEMAND OF COOLIDGE

Charges That Remus' Affidavit Confessing Perjury Before the Senate Daugherty Committee Was Forced From Him by Warden Sartain of the Atlanta Penitentiary--Senator Issues Statement.

Washington, Aug. 30.—Senator Burton K. Wheeler, candidate for vice president on the La Follette ticket, has demanded of President Coolidge the removal of Albert Sartain of Columbus as warden of the federal penitentiary at Atlanta.

Wheeler's demand followed publication of a sworn affidavit by George E. Remus, Cincinnati millionaire bootlegger, now in the Atlanta prison, repudiating his testimony before the Wheeler-Brookhart investigating committee in Washington, in which Remus testified he had given the late Jesse Smith huge sums of money for liquor permits and "protection."

"The Daugherty gang" is charged by Wheeler with having instigated this new move of Remus and the vice presidential candidate calls upon the president to oust from office "the remainder of the Ohio crowd."

Wheeler charges in a statement that the Remus affidavit confessing perjury before the investigating committee was "forced" from him by Warden Sartain of the penitentiary. Remus has served seven months of his two-year sentence in Atlanta for violation of prohibition laws.

Remus declared that his testimony was given at the insistence of Harry Sterns, attorney for the senatorial committee, who promised him freedom as a reward. Sterns visited him at the Atlanta penitentiary on May 10, Remus swore, and declared he and the Wheeler-Brookhart committee were out to "get" Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty and that if he, Remus, would give damaging testimony, freedom would be given him.

Wheeler said: "George Remus wired to the committee on more than one occasion asking that he be called here and he told part of his story of how he gave money to Jesse Smith. Mrs. Remus produced checks which she told Senator Brookhart in my presence and in the presence of her attorney were cashed and the proceeds paid to Smith and to other go-betweens for Republican officials in Ohio, Washington and New York."

Wheeler said that Mrs. Remus was willing to testify to the names of the corrupt officials, providing she was given immunity by the administration. He closed his statement with criticism of administration inaction, saying that "thus far neither Mr. Coolidge nor his subordinates have done anything, to my knowledge. Mr. Coolidge is waiting until an aroused public conscience again demands action."

COOLIDGE SPEAKS

Hits "Political Quackery" for Social and Economic Evils.

Washington, Aug. 30.—In a speech to the Fraternal congress, meeting in this city, President Coolidge urged his hearers to practice the "simple, homely, elemental virtues of industry, thrift, loyalty, common sense, faith and the Golden Rule before turning to political quackery and panaceas for social and economic evils." He stressed the need of bringing the citizens of the country to a realization of the "power within ourselves."

The virtues he named, Mr. Coolidge said, "are fundamental and always work. Before we conclude that the times are altogether out of joint, that all our institutions have proven a failure, that we must have an entire new order of things, we ought to be certain that we have fully availed ourselves of the advantage of the observance of these simple virtues. It will be time enough to experiment with proposed substitutes when these have been exhausted."

Suicide the Verdict.

Chillicothe, O., Aug. 30.—John Deffenbaugh, 55, farmer of Laurelville, was found dead near his home with a bullet wound in his head. An investigation made by county officials resulted in a verdict of suicide.

Girl Drowns.

Ironton, O., Aug. 30.—Edna Pruitt, 16, drowned in the Ohio river below Sedgwick. The body has not been recovered.

AMIR ABDULLAH

Ruler of Transjordan, One of the Great Arabian States.

Would Settle Auto License Fuss.

Columbus, Aug. 30.—Representatives of the state highway department of West Virginia will meet with Ohio representatives in Columbus to try to work out a reciprocity truck license plan to govern the operation of Ohio trucks in West Virginia and West Virginia trucks in Ohio. Under provisions of the Freeman-Collister law, all freight trucks and passenger buses operating in Ohio must obtain a license from the utilities commission. No provision is made for the exemption of foreign trucks making casual trips into the state and truck men crossing the line from West Virginia have been arrested in several border counties. West Virginia officials retaliated by arresting Ohio drivers.

TO SAVE SLAYERS FROM GALLOWS

Defense to Stage Fight in Event of Death Sentence.

PLANS REVEALED BY ATTORNEY

Jury Can Be Asked For to Pass Upon the Sanity of Leopold and Loeb, or Appeal to Supreme Court to Set Aside Ruling or Appeal to Governor For Commutation of Sentence—Crowe's Statement.

Chicago, Aug. 30.—Chief Justice Caverly began the weighing of evidence in the hearing of Nathan Leopold and Richard Loeb for the murder of Robert Franks. He will remain in retirement until Sept. 10, on which date he will pronounce sentence on the pair.

If the judge imposes the death sentence, the defense will start a new fight to save the youths from death, it was revealed. Preliminary plans are being made now. The state's attorneys' office also is completing plans to ward off the defense in the event of a death sentence.

There are three methods by which the defense can stage a fight to snatch the youths from the gallows, Samuel Ettleson, personal counsel for Jacob Franks, father of the little victim, explained. First, the defense can ask for a jury to pass on the sanity of the youths on the grounds that they have become insane during or since the trial and sentence; second, an appeal to the state supreme court to set aside the ruling of the lower courts on the grounds of error can be made, and third, an appeal to the governor for commutation of sentence.

While Clarence Darrow, chief defense attorney, refused to comment, simply stating he would do his utmost to save the boys from death if they are sentenced to the gallows, Ettleson said he felt this would be the second step of the defense. He believes the defense's first move will be to go before the supreme court and claim error. If both steps are unproductive, an appeal to Governor Small will follow, Ettleson believes.

State's Attorney Crowe said that if Justice Caverly orders life in jail for the boys, the state could do nothing about it. Steps are being taken by Cook county authorities to name the guards to surround the criminal court building here Sept. 10, when Justice Caverly pronounces sentence on Leopold and Loeb. These steps are being taken because of the threats received by Caverly.

DONAHEY ISSUES ORDER

National Guard to Participate in Defense Day Exercises.

Columbus, Aug. 30.—In a general order issued from the adjutant general's office, Governor Donahey gave the command that will order the mobilization of the Ohio national guard units at their home stations, for the national defense test on Sept. 12. The governor's order was issued in conjunction with the war department's plans for the test.

According to the order, the test mobilization "may be counted as a drill, provided that a one and one-half hour period is used for instruction, and that the necessary percentage of officers and men of a unit as prescribed for drill are present." The assembly will be made at 7 p. m. unless local units co-operate with the civil authorities in a patriotic observance, in which case the evening drill will not be necessary.

The governor urges that every effort be made to assemble 100 per cent of the commissioned and enlisted strength of all units. Provision is made for reports to the adjutant general on the defense test.

GASOLINE EXPLODES

Six Persons Killed in Accident in Pittsburgh Garage.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 30.—Six persons were killed and as many more injured by an explosion of gasoline here. The accident occurred in the garage of the People's Natural Gas company. The company's building was damaged to the extent of $10,000. A 1,500 gallon tank of gasoline let go, destroying several automobiles. Three boys were among the victims. The dead: Robert McFall, 7; Patsy DeGrazia; John Messina, 6; Patrick Kane, James Montgomery, 7, and Francis Browne. The boys were playing in the street near the garage.

MISS ANNA STILLMAN

DOINGS IN OHIO

To Run For Supreme Court Judge.

Columbus, Aug. 30.—It was announced that Warren Thomas of Trumbull county will enter the race for justice of the supreme court for the short term extending from election day to Jan. 1. Selection of a justice for that short term was made necessary by the death of Judge Wanamaker. Justice Harry L. Conn, appointed by Governor Donahey to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Justice Wanamaker, is to be a candidate for the short term, which runs only until after the next election, and will have his name put on the ballot by petition.

Rose Denies Charges.

Cincinnati, Aug. 30.—L. S. Rose, president of the Rose Brothers company, contractors, made complete denial of charges that the firm's workers had taken materials to which it was not entitled under contract in wrecking Camp Sherman. Three company employees were arrested at Chillicothe on charges of fraud in this connection. Rose asserted government officials had challenged the company's rights from the first. He welcomed the investigation, Rose added, and stated he has offered the company's books for inspection.

Willis on Maine Situation.

Columbus, Aug. 30.—Senator Frank B. Willis arrived here from a campaign tour of Maine in the interest of the Republican ticket. He said: "I have participated in a great many campaigns in Maine and know the people and their political viewpoints, but I have never participated in a campaign in which such enthusiasm and determination are manifested as in this one."

Hunter's Costly Mistake.

Newark, O., Aug. 30.—Edward Bucy, 14, was shot and instantly killed and his father, Harry Bucy, 40, railroad mechanic, was seriously wounded about the head when Jesse Phillips, mistaking them for groundhogs, fired a charge from a shotgun. The tragedy occurred five miles northwest of this city. Phillips is grief-stricken over the affair.

Firebug Suspected.

Toledo, Aug. 30.—Three fires here are being investigated on the belief that they were caused by a firebug. A frame dwelling owned by M. Perry, a warehouse belonging to the A. Bentley and Sons company, contractors, and a bungalow at the University of Toledo were burned by unknown causes.

Woman Hangs Self.

Cincinnati, Aug. 30.—Despondency over her inability to rent several flats she owned is believed to have caused Mrs. Laura Jones, 53, to hang herself here. She tied a rope to a gas fixture, fastened it about her neck and leaped from a chair.

Police Chief Quits.

Circleville, O., Aug. 30.—John Myers, chief of police, has resigned. He has been a member of the police department for 20 years.

Touched Live Wire.

Portsmouth, O., Aug. 30.—Alex Rogers, 40, came into contact with a high tension wire in a local power plant and was electrocuted.

Hinton Team Wins.

Hinton, W. Va., Aug. 30.—The Hinton team of the Chesapeake and Ohio baseball league was the champion of the entire railroad system, having won the title in a series with the Richmond, Va., team, champions of the eastern division. The issue was settled when Hinton defeated Richmond 3 to 0 in the second game of a three-game series. Hinton won the first game, 10 to 1.

HOSTILITIES LOOM IN CHINA

Leaders of Rival Factions Preparing for Clash.

AMERICANS BELIEVED SAFE

Gravity of Situation in the Shanghai-Nanking Region Considered by President Coolidge and Cabinet. Additional American Warship Summoned From Chefoo—Civilians Fleeing the Affected District.

Washington, Aug. 30.—The gravity of the situation in China was considered by President Coolidge and cabinet.

Secretary of State Hughes presented reports from American Charge d'Affaires Bell that war is near in the Shanghai-Nanking region of China, where there are many Americans. The 3,000 Americans in Shanghai include more than 1,000 women and children, many of them connected with American missions. They are believed to be safe.

Press dispatches say that General Wu Peifu, leading one of the factions, announced that he has employed a squadron of airplanes piloted by American and British aviators and that the machines will leave Shanghai for the front. A lieutenant General Lu, rival war lord, was doing his utmost to recruit other British and American pilots and it was generally believed airplanes may prove a decisive factor in the fighting believed to be imminent.

A fourth American warship arrived in the harbor to protect American interests.

The foreign and Chinese chambers of commerce both have brought all pressure to bear to restore peace and sent envoys to the rival war lords urging them to attempt to reach an agreement.

Additional American and British warships have been summoned from Chefoo. There are more than 60,000 troops in the Quin San district, 30 miles out of Shanghai. Thousands of Chinese already are fleeing into the country.

Fleets of the rival leaders both are steaming toward Shanghai, one from Foo Chow and one from Nanking. It is believed there may soon be a naval engagement.

HINES EXPLAINS DEFENSE DAY PLANS

In Harmony With Desire for World Peace, He Says.

Washington, Aug. 30.—Major General John L. Hines, who will succeed General Pershing as chief of staff of the army, explained the war department's defense plans as in "thorough harmony with America's desire for world peace."

General Hines said: "Our plans are not secret. We are not a militaristic nation and our provisions for national defense are not offensive. They have no hostile object. We cherish the sound belief that our desire to be adequately prepared for the defense of our country and for the maintenance of the high principles of liberty and freedom on which our nation is founded, is thoroughly compatible with our desire for world peace."

"We have for the first time in our history a sound military policy, a policy intended to provide for adequate minimum diversion of our economic effort and resources from the paths of commercial and industrial development. It is the policy of a peace-loving nation. It is distinctly defensive, and not aggressive."

Dawes Proposes Commission.

Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 30.—Discussing the farm situation in a speech here, Charles G. Dawes, Republican candidate for vice president, said: "We make but one promise, that the Republican party, utilizing the best minds and those by training best fitted for the task, will bend its every energy to the study of our agricultural problem to the end that through legislation or other means its solution may be accomplished. Whoever promises more than this is entering into a contract which can not be filled." He proposed a nonpartisan commission to study the farm problem.

PARENTS LOSE CASE

Juvenile Marriage Upheld by Common Pleas Judge.

Columbus, Aug. 30.—In an opinion rendered by Common Pleas Judge Rogers juvenile marriages were upheld and parental interference with couples under legal marriageable age was dealt a severe blow. Judge Rogers gave the opinion in deciding the case of Casper Hilton, who has been fighting to obtain possession of his wife, Katherine Fern Kleinbell, held at the juvenile detention home since the middle of June. The judge also overruled a motion brought by the girl's father, Otey Kleinbell, to prevent her husband from associating, conversing or communicating with his daughter.

Kleinbell brought suit to annul the marriage, claiming his daughter was only 14 when she eloped with Hilton to Circleville, where they were married without his consent. The court's opinion in effect means that couples over 12 years of age could be married, even by common law, in Ohio, and parents could not annul the ceremony unless either of the parties would consent to the annulment.

Value of Farm Products.

Columbus, Aug. 30.—J. L. Falconer, head of the rural economics department at Ohio State university, estimated that the purchasing power of farm products has risen to 98 per cent of normal. During the last half year the farmer's buying power has been gradually on the increase, Falconer pointed out. He said that in March his ability to buy commodities was down to 77 cents on the dollar, in April it was 78 cents, in July it soared to 88 cents, and then this month it reached 98 per cent of normal. "Normal," he explained, refers to the five-year period from 1909 to 1913.

LONDON PACT RATIFIED

Reichstag Accepts Railway Laws in the Dawes Program.

Berlin, Aug. 30.—The reichstag ratified the London treaty after a long and bitter debate. The government mustered 314 votes, more than the necessary two-thirds majority, for the all-important railway laws in the Dawes-Young program for reparations payments and thereby accepted the whole arrangement. The bank of issue and rentenmark laws had been previously passed and formal application of the new reparations program now awaits only the formal signature which will be affixed by the interested powers in London. The reichstag again gave its support to the Marx government, rejecting a no-confidence motion introduced by the right wing elements, 251 to 49.

Smuggled Saws to Prisoners.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 30.—Warden John Egan announced that the cell of every prisoner in the western Pennsylvania penitentiary is being thoroughly searched for guns, saws and other material alleged to have been smuggled to a score of the thousand convicts now incarcerated in the institution. The search follows the arrest of a prison guard and his subsequent confession that he had been paid for smuggling saws to prisoners.

Time

The world's first clock was in the tower of San Eustorgio in Milan, Italy. It was placed there in the year 1300. That's a long time to us who live only a few years, but a short time in the long history of humanity. The invention of the clock was the birth of industrial slavery.—Chicago Post.

When Newly Painted

To prevent windows sticking the thing to remember is that for two or three days after the frames are painted each window should be opened and run up and down two or three times a day. Unless this is done the windows are almost certain to stick.

Lake Far Below Sea

The deepest hollow known in the lands of the world is the one in Palestine at the bottom of which lies the Dead sea. The hollow containing this salt lake is actually 1,300 feet below the level of the sea.

Just What Is Beauty?

Beauty cannot be described, since what seems beautiful to one may be plain to another. Ben Jonson's "most beautiful face" had to possess simplicity crowned by flowing hair and a sweet neglect; Spenser would have eyes like sapphires, teeth like pearls, and a forehead like ivory; Rogers insisted on archness and mirth. Every lover thinks his girl is beautiful.

War and Disputes

What Tully says of war may be applied to disputing—it should be always so managed as to remember that the only true end of it is peace; but generally true disputants are like true sportsmen, their whole delight is in the pursuit; and a disputant no more cares for the truth than the sportsman for the hare.—Pope.

The Ugliest

There are curious birds in Africa and the most beautiful birds in the world are to be found there. We have seen them preserved in museum cases, and alive in zoological gardens. But Africa has also what is probably the very ugliest bird there is in the shoe-bill, a large wading bird.

DONKEY AND MULE
SERVE MAN WELL*In Some Countries Rank Far Above Horse.

The donkey and the mule, slandered and slurred, more often cursed than discussed, maligned and impugned as obstreperous, cantankerous beasts of burden, have served man long and well. The best donkeys, says the Brooklyn Eagle, are not to be found in this country, although in the coal mines and mountainous regions the patiently working little beasts daily render a service that no other animal could well perform. Because of their hard, tough hoofs they are able to climb rugged and rocky mountains and to traverse parts of the earth's surface that would be impassable to a horse.

The donkeys of Spain are especially good, and in Egypt the donkey is far more precious than the horse. It is said that the donkey is far better able to find its way over the desert than is the camel, and travelers have reported seeing long lines of camels traveling in a caravan with a single donkey in the lead. The camels carry the water supply for their little pilot of the caravan and, in return for this service, he leads them safely in the right direction.

The donkey is, the father of the mule. On the eastern continent donkeys run wild and have interbred with horses. The mule is the result of this interbreeding, its father being the donkey and its mother the horse. The mule and the donkey are alike in many respects. The mule is the larger of the two animals, but both have the same streak of obstinacy and an excellent memory. As a matter of fact, their memory is often too good. They will long remember people who have mistreated them and plainly show their resentment for a long time after. They are alike endowed with a will power that is peculiarly strong and they like to have their own way. This trait has earned for them the reputation of being balky, obstreperous and obstinate.

The donkey has a mouth that is lined with very tough skin so that he can live on vegetable fare that would probably kill a less hardy animal. Thistles he can masticate thoroughly. Both the mule and the donkey can live on rough food on which a horse would starve to death. Each eats considerably less than a horse.

In European and Asiatic countries and, in fact, in all countries where there is much mountainous territory, a great part of the commerce is dependent upon the donkey. The hardy little animal can carry a load of unbelievable weight with apparent ease and little discomfort. Caravans of them will start on a long trip over the mountains heavily loaded with merchandise for all parts of the world. Over the mountains and down to a seaport he will carry his burden. There the cargo of spices, camphor and what not is loaded on ships and carried to the four corners of the earth.

The Caste System

This is a social system in India. The population is divided into a large number of hereditary groups which refuse to have anything to do with members of any other group. In some parts of India there are as many as two hundred of these groups, any member of which would be considered tainted if he so much as sat down at a table with a member of a lower caste. The system is now being rapidly broken down by the influence of the British. Castes are supposed to have had their origin in the successive conquests of the country by peoples from the north. With each conquest the superior caste was supplanted by a conquering caste. These different classes refused to intermarry and for the most part the individuals followed the occupations of their fathers. The word "caste" is now loosely applied to the different social classes in any country.—The Pathfinder.

Pre-Raphaelites

The name "Pre-Raphaelites" was given in England about 1850 to a group of painters, including Millais, Holman Hunt, Alma Tadema and Dante Gabriel Rossetti, who rebelled against the conventionality of routine teaching in art, and sought to return to the natural method, as practiced previous to the time of Raphael (1483-1520). The Pre-Raphaelites were ably championed by the famous art critic, John Ruskin. As a school they were severely criticized, but their work was productive of much good.—Kansas City Star.

Don't Pass on Learning

Descendants of educated rats are just as stupid as their parents were before going to school. At least that is what results of experiments on 247 animals by E. M. Vicari of the zoological laboratory of Columbia university, published in Science, seem to indicate. He found that rats of the fourth generation did not learn how to find food in a labyrinth any quicker than had their ancestors of the first generation.

Pleasing Bobby

"That's a remarkably strong sauce you have, Mrs. Tabasco," said the visitor, as he wiped a tear from his eyes. "Yes," was the reply. "We always have a bottle on the table, although we don't use it ourselves." The visitor looked puzzled. "Well, you see," came the explanation, "it does so amuse Bobby when people take an overdose and pretend they like it."

After 120 Years

On July 5, 1803, Capt. Meriwether Lewis and William Clark, commissioned by President Jefferson to explore the Northwest to the Pacific, left Washington, D. C., westward bound. Two and one-half years later, on March 23, 1806, having accomplished their objective after wintering on the banks of the Columbia, they turned their faces eastward and hurrying back they were able to recross the continent in eleven months.

A short time ago one man climbed into his airplane on the East coast at dawn and as twilight deepened into dusk along the shore of the Pacific he swung down through the mist and taxied across the field to a stop. The time elapsed on his journey, made without a mishap, is measured not in days and months and years, but in hours, minutes and seconds. The transcontinental trip that took Lewis and Clark more than two years to cover, Lieut. Russell L. Maughan, army flyer, accomplished in 18 hours, 16 minutes flying time. His average speed was 158.17 miles an hour.—From the St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Irrigation's Reward

Bahawalpur, an independent Indian state, is now a mere fringe of cultivation bordering upon the Indus river and southern Punjab. With the completion of the Sukkur barrage and Sutlej canal, however, practically 2,000,000 acres, especially adapted to wheat and cotton, will be added to the crop acreage of the state, which bids fair to become one of the richest in that region. It is estimated that the present population of 750,000 will be increased by 500,000 colonists from other parts of India.

HERRICK REFRIGERATORS

The Big Difference In Refrigerators

The main object of any refrigerator, of course, is the preservation of foods. The refrigerator that will keep foods in perfect condition longest is naturally the refrigerator you want—provided it doesn't increase your ice bills.

The Herrick answers those requirements with facts—not claims. And it does even more. It actually decreases your ice bills while giving you more effective food preservation.

And why? Simply because the Herrick is far more than an ice box—far more than a cold storage place. It is built on the scientifically demonstrated principle that more than merely cold air is necessary to keep foods in good condition for any great length of time.

Perhaps the biggest essentials to scientifically correct refrigeration are—

- No. 1. Circulation of cold dry air.
- No. 2. Effective insulation.
- No. 3. Air-tight construction.

That the Herrick has these necessary essentials is a demonstrated fact.

Many proofs of the truth are visible even to the least informed purchaser. Others are hidden within the walls of the refrigerator, but nevertheless there, performing their functions so important to good health and economy.

Dresses for Evening in Fall-Winter Mode

Showing a striking evening gown and wrap for fall and winter seasons. Metal brocade is much in prominence. The gown is embroidered all over with colored beads to harmonize with the burnt orange velvet lining of the wrap, and both garments are trimmed with fitch fur.

Do Not Neglect Your Wounds and Bruises

"The tragic death of young Calvin Coolidge, Jr., served dramatically to show that no wound is slight," said Doctor Harry W. Gentles, chairman first aid committee, Chicago chapter of American Red Cross. "There is always the danger of infection. When the skin is abraded or cut, do not go on with your tennis or golf—avoid further irritation. If the swelling, pain or redness continues, consult a doctor. "It is a great mistake to wrap a handkerchief around a bruise. Thousands of infections prove to doctors that so-called 'clean cloths' are never free of germ life.

"If you get a slight wound or bruise, do not neglect it. Serious sickness may result, and occasionally septic poisoning may cause death. There are four simple things that one should do:

"First, apply half-strength tincture of iodine to the wound, or better, use glass ampoules. Never apply near the eyes, between the thighs or for wounds of the intestines. It is a mistake to wash the injury. Iodine is a destroyer of germs, and is very effective, as war surgeons proved.

"Second, apply a sterile piece of gauze, folded into a convenient pad. Third, wrap this dressing with a sterile gauze bandage. Fourth, fasten the bandage with adhesive plaster. It is simple to do, but it may save much suffering later."

How to Launder Your Bright-Colored Frock

Those bright-colored frocks that are so fashionable can be washed without fading if you take the precaution to set the colors before they are laundered. If you make the dresses yourself this can be done before making them up.

If the material is green or lavender, soak it at least fifteen minutes in vinegar and water, using about two gallons of cold water to which has been added half a cupful of strong vinegar.

Salt and water will set black and black and white; and is equally good for other colors. Use four table-spoonfuls of salt to one gallon of water and soak the fabrics ten minutes. A little turpentine should be added to the salted water if the colors are blue or pink.

A mixture of oxgall and water is used by many housewives to set grays and browns, but soaking these colored fabrics in the vinegar and water solutions for ten minutes will effectually set the colors.

Some laundresses prefer alum, two ounces to a tub of water, to set green, pink, red or lavender.

If you set the colors as suggested and use reasonable care in washing, such as washing in tepid water, (hot water takes out color), rinsing in cold water and hanging the garment in the shade, your colored frocks will retain their original colors.

Parasols That Tone In

Parasols that will tone in with many different color schemes are often hard to find but are well worth the search. Unusually attractive are those of printed silk that have small designs and soft colors that blend into each other so that a rather indefinite effect is produced.

Cloth of Gold

For evening gowns for the coming winter Paris is turning out some very gorgeous gowns of cloth of gold or silver, absolutely untrimmed and practically undraped.

Tribute to the Legion

"CERTAINLY if any organization is in a position to recognize the value of mutual understanding between nations, it is the American Legion," declared William Mather Lewis, president of George Washington university, in an address on "Education for International Understanding" made before the National Educational association at a recent meeting of that organization at Washington. President Mather continued: "The improved architecture in various parts of our nation, particularly in smaller communities, bears testimony to the effect which their stay in Europe had upon our soldiers. Likewise, the improved sanitary conditions in the reconstructed districts of France bear testimony to the lessons learned from our troops." In referring further to the Legion, the noted savant stated: "It seems to me that one who would not go to the defense of his government in its hour of danger has no right to enjoy its benefits in time of peace. The Legion has that right."

OBTAINS AID FOR MANY LEGION MEN

The national rehabilitation committee of the American Legion at Washington has thrown the spotlight on many little obscure dramas of the World war that for many seasons past have played to an unresponsive house, with the result that hundreds of disabled veterans, who of themselves were unable to obtain relief, are now on the road to health and happiness. There is the case of John Adams, disabled veteran, to whom the Legion extended a helping hand.

In June, 1918, John Adams enlisted at Pittsburgh, Pa., as a private in the infantry. The following October, while participating in bayonet drill, he got tangled up with that instrument and jabbed himself in the groin. He was bandaged up by one of the camp doctors. He got better and, though his side troubled him now and then, he didn't take any particular pains to tell the army surgeons about it when he was examined for discharge, and consequently got by the mustering-out officers with a clear bill of health.

John went back to his pre-war work as a stationary engineer and carried on for some ten months. Then his old bayonet wound began to assert itself. He had to give up the struggle and filed a claim for compensation in December, 1919. He was sent by the veterans' bureau to a government hospital to be operated on several months later for gland trouble in his groin. Immediately following the operation he grew worse, until it became necessary to rate him as permanently and totally disabled, no service connection, however, being admitted.

From that time on John's life has been just one hospital after another—and John was still a very sick man. John had never been to school much, and had to depend upon others to lead him through the red-tape labyrinth that shut off help. One agency after another was lost in the maze. Then some one steered John onto the national rehabilitation committee of the American Legion. Things looked better from then on.

The Legion committee got the names of his comrades in the service, secured their affidavits affirming John's accident at camp; obtained the name and affidavit of the medical officer who treated John at camp, and finally got together the historical data necessary to establish the fact that the boy was hurt in the manner, on the date, at the place, just as he said.

But this was not enough. There was no mention of a bayonet stab anywhere in John's official papers in the War department. Therefore, John could not have been stabbed. He was still "out of luck" in so far as connecting his disability with service was concerned. John had by now been hospitalized continuously for four years and a half. He was ragged. He despaired—but not the Legion. Outside physicians and surgeons were called in. The government doctors were interviewed personally and finally, with every bit of evidence that could be secured from all sources, the case was placed before the director of the veterans' bureau at a special conference with Legion representatives.

Within a few days John received a check for several thousand dollars from the United States veterans' bureau, covering the compensation he had gone without for so many years.

Demand Monument for First Killed in War

In Locust Hill cemetery, Evansville, Ind., lies the body of the first American soldier to lose his life in the World war. No imposing monument casts a protecting shadow over that grave; it is marked only by a small glass fruit jar with a piece of paper inside bearing his name in faded letters "James Bethel Gresham."

The Everette Burdette post of the American Legion of Evansville is sponsoring a movement to raise funds to build a monument over this last resting place of the first doughboy to go "west." The chamber of commerce and other civic clubs and organizations are planning to support the movement.

Gresham was honored with a state funeral when his body was returned from France.

YOUNG GIRLS

Under 16 May Marry According to Decision of Judge Rogers.

According to the decision of Judge Charles M. Rogers of Columbus, in the case of Oley Kleinbell, father of Catherine Kleinbell, the fifteen year old girl, who married Casper Hilton, girls over the age of twelve can marry in this state, notwithstanding the fact that the statute requires them to be 16 years old before a license can be issued. The father of the girl mentioned brought suit to have the marriage annulled.

The marriage license to marry the girl, was procured in this county and Hilton is now in the county jail on a perjury charge.

If the above decision correctly construes the law of Ohio, it is time the statutes should be changed so as to meet such cases as the one before the court.

GLAD TO BE HERE

Prince of Wales Makes Statement on Arrival in New York.

New York, Aug. 30.—The Prince of Wales on his arrival here made this statement:

"Some of my American friends have very kindly given me the opportunity of breaking my holiday trip to my Canadian ranch by a short stay on Long Island, that I may see the international polo matches. There is no need for me to say how glad I am to accept their hospitable offer. I am looking forward to my brief fortnight on Long Island because I know my American host will give me what I am looking for, a real holiday. I had an excellent trip. I am here quite unofficially and certainly not on business. I am glad to be back in America once more."

The first official word of welcome was a wireless message from President Coolidge, transmitted from an airplane which soared high above the liner as she nosed her way in.

Thrilling Parachute Leap.

Washington, Aug. 30.—Two army airmen, Lieutenant L. L. Koonitz and Private Walter E. Goggin, jumped in parachutes from a disabled army plane and landed safely on Bolling field. During a practice flight the plane went into a tail spin at the 3,000-foot level and after frantic efforts to right the machine, which turned from a tail spin into a nose dive, both men leaped out and floated safely to earth. The plane was demolished.

Bank Robbed.

Minneapolis, Aug. 30.—Five bandits raided the Fidelity State bank here while two assistant cashiers were alone, scooped up between $500 and $1,000 and fled.

THE WEATHER.

Ohio—Sunday: Probably thunder-showers.

HERE AND THERE

Lieutenant Thoret established a new world's record for motorless flying at St. Remy, France, when he remained in the air nine hours and four minutes.

Senator Carter Glass is ill at his home near Lynchburg, Va., with erysipelas.

L. C. Hall, attorney, was run out of Bishop, Cal., by seven men as the culmination of a fight over water rights cases in the courts.

Henry Ford and wife are to take lessons in the old "square" dances from Mr. and Benjamin Lovett of Hudson, Mass., early next month. A petition in bankruptcy against Wilson & Company, packers, is on file in New York. It was brought by three creditors, with claims totaling $2,600.

Ned Wayburn, who stages the Folies, said at Chicago that bobbed hair is going out of style as far as the stage is concerned.

FOUR MINSTREL ACES.

Manager Coburn announces the engagement of Four Minstrel Aces in Charles "Slim" Vermont, Roddy Jordan, Nate Mulroy and Hank White as principal comedians and funmakers for the 1924-25 season of J. A. Coburn's minstrels at the Grand opera house on Monday, September 8. Each of these well known performers has made a host of friends in past years as top-notch funny men and should provide ample and enjoyable entertainment in minstrel merriment. With Carl Minch and Norbert C. Lion both exceptionally fine baritones and interlunctors, Morris Neslon, Swiss yodler and tenor Charles Donlan, Jack Leighman, J. P. Henderson, Dale Sarty and Homer Featheringill minstrelsy's greatest basso a splendid octette of soloists are assured. McAtee & McGuire, Allen & Hunt, Dolan & Clay and Jack Peterson as dancers and endmen also contribute to the jazz and jingle thruout the performance. It is said to be the best company "Cobe" has ever had.

LOQUACIOUS.

Calvin Coolidge at the end of his first month in the White House made most interesting remark to the clerk from the treasury.

The clerk came with a check from the treasury for the amount of Calvin Coolidge's first monthly salary as president of the United States. It was an impressive amount. It was one-twelfth of $75,000.

Calvin Coolidge looked at it intently. He said nothing. He drew the check toward him and folded it up and put it in his pocket, still saying nothing. He reached for the receipt and signed it and pushed it back to the clerk. Then, at that overpowering moment in his career, he arrived at saying something. He looked up at the clerk and said: "Come again."

EDGAR L. BRYAN DEAD.

Edgar L. Bryan, aged 51 years, of New Holland, Ohio, died in Columbus Radium hospital on Thursday night following an abdominal operation. He was retired and is survived by a brother, Melvin Bryan, of Washington C. H. The body was taken to New Holland Saturday for funeral services and burial.

WORTHY CAUSE

Drive to be Put on for Circleville Benevolent Association.

The expected drive early in the summer for funds to support the work of the Circleville Benevolent association was unavoidably delayed. Plans are now almost complete for a house to house canvas on Wednesday and Thursday, September 3 and 4.

It is the hope of the association that every one in the community may be sufficiently interested in the work for better health to make some contribution, be it large or small.

The amount of work to be done during the coming winter will be governed to a certain extent by the amount of money received during this drive.

The salary of the nurse must be provided for. Mothers of the sixty-five new babies whom she has cared for during the past year will testify to the value of her service.

Thru the use of scales in the public schools last year the association was able to locate 129 children who were more than five pounds under weight, due to malnutrition or other causes that might be remedied.

Many cases of bad throat and nose troubles and defective teeth were found and parents notified so that cases might be cared for before permanent injury had been done.

To the children who were more than five pounds underweight was given a half pint of milk each day.

Your contribution will help to continue this valuable service to the boys and girls who thus helped to better health will make better scholars and hence better citizens.

AMUSEMENTS

Pola Negri in her fourth American starring picture, "Shadows of Paris," a Herbert Brenon Paramount production is surrounded by a brilliant array of supporting players.

Adolphe Menjou, Charles de Roche and Huntly Gordon head the cast in featured roles. Among others are Gareth Hughes, Verna Reynolds, Rose Doine, Rosita Marstini, Edward Kipling, Maurice Cannon, Frank Nelson and George O'Brien.

Adolphe Menjou but recently scored heavily in Charles Chaplin's "A Woman in Paris." He has appeared time and again under the Paramount banner.

Charles de Roche, since he came to America from France, has supported Dorothy Dalton in "The Law of the Lawless." He also appears as King Pharoah in Cecil B. DeMille's forthcoming Paramount production, "The Ten Commandments." In William de Mille's "The Marriage Maker" he plays the faun.

Huntly Gordon—Bluebeard in "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife" starring Gloria Swanson.

All the other members of the cast are well known stage and screen favorites.

"Shadows of Paris," which will be shown at the Met theater on Monday next to remain for three days is from the French play, "Mon Homme," by Andre Picard and Francis Carco. It was adapted for the American stage by Fred Jackson. The scenario was written by Eve Unsell.

BIG NATIONAL PARK
FOR SOUTH AFRICA

Fifty-Mile Preserve for Its Fauna and Flora.

Cape Town.—South Africa is to have a great national park similar to those which exist in America, Canada and Australia. It lies in a wondrous country, Mont-aux-Sources, in Drakensberg, a land of peaks and pine forests unequalled in splendor throughout South Africa. Here are the caves containing the Bushman paintings, subject of profoundly interesting historical controversy.

It is here too that the lordly Tugela takes its source in a water-cut tunnel through which the stream drops from a height of 2,000 feet. Nearly the whole of the region in its fifty miles extent is owned by the government, and the Natal people have cordially accepted the ownership of this glorious natural paradise.

The fauna and flora are to be protected, and arrangements have been made for the reintroduction of the natural buck. Thousands of years ago the zebra and the koodoo and the eland used to roam this gorgeous country, and soon it is hoped that these animals will find here a natural playground.

All shooting of game in the park and the destruction of bush by natives has been prohibited, and the Natal administration is confident that all these species will increase and the bush and grass soon be restored. In the Mont-aux-Sources area a park superintendent is now in residence with a staff of rangers. Certain parts of the national park are especially fitted for the purposes of afforestation, and exotic timber trees are to be introduced.

The Natal administration is considering the erection of a larger hotel for the accommodation of visitors than the single buildings at present existing. The idea is that the new hotel should be on a site about 4,000 feet above sea level, with the mountains several thousand feet above, and within easy access to bushes, streams and waterfalls, so that picnic parties can have a wide choice of beauty spots and bathing pools.

Advertisement for Ear
Brings Several Offers

Chicago.—Philanthropy, mother love, bravado, desperation and a father's anxiety to obtain money to care for a little son, all figured in answers to the advertisement by a plastic surgeon for some one who would sell part of a human ear.

The surgeon has a patient, a young man, who was in a runaway accident eight months ago and half his left ear had to be amputated. Now he desires to marry and is anxious to have the ear patched up.

An Englishman was a philanthropist. He wanted no pay, but desired to help out an unfortunate man. He already has given away blood for transfusion and a number of persons are wearing patches of his skin, contributed in grafting operations.

The mother of six children, of whom she was the sole support, offered her ear. She already has sold her blood in cases of transfusion. She said she needed the money and could drape her hair over the missing ear.

A lake sailor came in and said he would contribute an ear just for the fun of the thing—merely a case of bravado, the surgeons say.

All the ears submitted are normal and the surgeon insists upon an abnormally large ear.

Soulful Greetings Block
Traffic in Paris Subway

Paris.—Romance has to get out of the path of progress. Paris, among its other picturesque aspects, always seemed to Americans like a great "lovers' lane," especially in the morning and evening, when young people go along hand in hand to and from work, and at parting and reuniting stand sometimes for minutes locked in a fond embrace as though saying farewell forever.

The city authorities have stationed censors to break up these soulful greetings in the subway stations.

London Society Is
"Hunting Treasure"

London.—A fine and suspenseful of her driving license, imposed on the Hon. Lois Sturt, a socially prominent young woman of London, for speeding at the rate of 50 miles an hour in Regent park, has brought into the light the activities of what has come to be known as the "Society of Bright Young People."

The arrest and fine revealed that the latest hobby of the younger social set is the elaborately organized "treasure hunt." Money is secreted in various parts of London, and motor parties follow the trail from point to point, with clues which involve a combination of quotations or the solving of acrostics.

Lady Diana Cooper is one of the keenest players in this game, the style of which may henceforth be cramped, however, by Miss Sturt's breach of the speed laws. She was glad to inform the court, however, that she had carried off the prize in the contest.

WILDCATS!

The wildest clan are fierce and fond of battle.
They feast on forest hares and such wild cattle;

Their claws are keen, their tails are merely stumps,
They seize their preys in predatory jumps.

Where wild catalpa grows, or wild catwaba,
They rove—from Catatunk to Escanaba.

And leave in wildwood dells for all to see
The marks of many a wild catastrophe

The wildcat fears no sanguinary killer
To him the bear is but a caterpillar;
Upon the fox and all his thievish cult
He hurls his weight as from a catapult.

At dead of night on paws as soft as mittens
The wildcats come and bring their wilder kittens.

On moonlit crags their blended voices jar;
They yowl as tho they had a wild catarrh.

Let maiden ladies pet their meek wild cats!
I celebrate the caterwauling wildcats!—Saturday evening Post.

Corn to Mature in Short Season

We Already Have Varieties Requiring High Temperatures While Growing.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The "synthetic" development of a variety of corn that will grow and mature under conditions of short season and cool weather will be attempted by the corn investigators of the United States Department of Agriculture from a collection of 200 sample varieties of corn brought to the department by Frederick D. Richey, agronomist in charge of corn investigations, who has just returned from an exploratory trip through the Andean highlands of South America in company with R. A. Emerson of Cornell university.

Varieties Mature in Short Season.

"We already have varieties of corn in this country that will mature in short season," said Mr. Richey, "but they require high temperatures during the growing season. They are suitable for certain localities along the northern edge of the corn belt, but there are other places in the Northwest, as in Idaho, Montana and Wyoming, where the temperatures are low as well as the seasons short, and we hope to be able to develop a variety that will make corn growing in these sections a safe enterprise. This will have to be done, not by the mere introduction of foreign varieties, but by crossing and combining the ability of our native corn to mature in a short season with the ability of the South American corn to mature at low temperatures."

Most of the samples brought back by Mr. Richey were found growing at altitudes of from 7,000 to 11,000 feet, and some as high as 12,000 feet in the mountains of Bolivia and Peru. Corn matures in these altitudes in a climate which is 20 degrees colder than that of this country. Thus, Mr. Richey found native varieties growing and maturing in spite of an average temperature for the year of 50 degrees F., while the average minimum temperature during the growing season was as low as 39 degrees. In our corn belt an average minimum of 55 degrees night temperature is considered the limit. The average temperature during the entire growing season is 72 degrees. The season for the corn crop in these southern countries is from 120 to 180 days, while a few varieties in the northern edge of our own corn belt mature in 80 days.

Experiments in Peru.

On the trip through Peru Mr. Richey had the opportunity to observe varieties of corn from our own country growing in comparison with native corn. These experiments were on the farms of the Urso mission near Cuzco, Peru, under the direction of T. E. Payne, who is in charge of the mission. All of the United States varieties there were of a yellowish-green color, and did not look healthy, said Mr. Richey, while the native varieties were dark green and healthy. Likewise varieties from Peru which have previously been tried in the United States have not done well here. It is not possible, therefore, to introduce these South American sorts as such and expect them to be adapted to the conditions of our corn belt. The problem is rather one of crossing and breeding, in which the characteristics of the varieties instead of varieties as a whole are considered. The development of the desired varieties will be a long time proposition, but the investigators are encouraged to believe in the ultimate success of the venture by the results obtained in other experimental work with corn at the department.

The development of a variety of corn that will grow and mature at a low temperature in short seasons will enable many areas in the United States to grow corn, where the crop will be of value not only for itself but because of its use in rotation.

Markets for Poultry

Farm people are always a busy people, but they are not usually so busy that they cannot spare the time to find good markets for their poultry and poultry products. You can often realize a few cents per pound more for the cockerels by selling to some hotel, restaurant, or cafeteria than by disposing of them on the regular market. Of course, if you live close to a city this will be a very simple matter, but you can often find places in even a small town where you can receive premiums for quality produce.

Vermin Reduce Flocks

Common red mites, which infest hen houses and kill many chicks, can be done away with easily. First clean up all filth around the hen house and let plenty of sunshine into the building. Often the quarters become overcrowded. Where mites are found, paint the roosts and spray the walls with a solution of two parts of oil to one quart of stock dip. If lime-sulphur is on hand, a solution made with five gallons of lime-sulphur to 40 gallons of water will be effective.

Cow Is Quite Sensitive

Milking has much to do with securing a heavy and persistent flow of milk. The dairy cow is an extremely sensitive piece of animal machinery. Any changes are quickly registered on the milk-flow regulator and the yield is cut down. In order not to jar the cow's sensibilities she must be milked in the same place at regular times and by the same milker.

Mill Knitting Goes

Back to Year 1830

It was in Cohoes, N. Y., in 1830 that the first knitting mill in the United States was established, according to a research just completed by Textiles, which shows that in that year Egbert Egberts and Joshua Bailey began the manufacture of knitted underwear with two machines.

Years of study and experimentation were spent before machinery was invented that was practical for knitting, and it took more years before the public could be induced to discard its old muslin or "red hannel" underwear and accept the newfangled knitted garments.

In a tiny wooden shack the two pioneers set up their two primitive knitting machines and went to work. They had no assistants, either to operate the machines or to sell and distribute the finished knit goods. After spending the day at their machines they would start out with their merchandise piled into a little handcart, peddling from door to door, since they could find no retail storekeeper who was willing to take the risk of stocking up with any knitted garments.

The building in which the two pioneers established their mill has long since been demolished to make room for a more modern structure and there is no trace of the actual machinery used. It is interesting to note, however, that from its small beginning as the site of America's first knitting mill Cohoes has grown to be one of the principal centers of production of knitted underwear and outerwear in the country. More than twenty of the leading underwear knitting companies operate plants there, turning out thousands of dozens of garments daily.

How "Scoffdads" Grow

No baby was ever born a scoffdad, says the Evansville Journal and Courier. The attitude of the child toward the father is a matter that is up to the daddy. The paternal parent's mistake usually lies in the fact that he puts off getting a line on the baby until it is too late.

The time to establish diplomatic and disciplinary relations with the baby is when the little one for the first time sits upright among pillows in the new high chair to take part in the initial family circle dinner. If baby gets away from the forces of law and order on the first venture into society, woe be unto that house and unto negligent, erring and careless parents!

The cute and cunning baby hand that so cleverly grabs the butter, will grow to maturity with a turn for grabbing everything in sight, and it is not such a far cry from the high chair buttersnatcher to the ruthless and selfish squatter on public oil land. Self-control, orderly conduct and law observations in the high chair is the best foundation for self restraint, fairness, public and community spirit and business decency in the swivel chair. The father who fails to understand the business of being a parent, and who neglects personally to see to the proper laying of the foundation of character while the baby is in its beginnings, may come to know what a scoffdad is, and how bitter are the trials of a parent scorned.

Wagner's Gondolier

Two score years later than his one-time master, Signor Ganassetto, the favorite gondolier of Richard Wagner, has made his last trip and passed away at the age of eighty-two. After he had served Wagner for many years during the latter's visits to Venice, Ganassetto had the honor of having his portrait painted by Jankowsky, an artist friend of the composer, at the latter's request. On Christmas eve, 1882, the last seen by Wagner, the gondolier was one of the guests at the Wagner festivities. Later in the evening he rowed his host to the Teatro Venice, where the master conducted Mozart's "Magic Flute."

In February, 1883, Wagner, accompanied by his wife, Cosima, took his last trip through the canals of Venice. He asked to be rowed to the St. Michele cemetery. There he was seized by a fainting spell. Hurried home, he recovered consciousness, but six days later died. Ganassetto rowed the remains of his master to the railroad station, where they were put on a train for Germany.

Who Was It?

A Detroit driver driving through northern New York state at night, not long ago, was stopped by a sheriff in a small town and asked if he had seen anyone walking along the road or if he had been asked for a "lift." Replying in the negative, he was told that a convict had escaped from the penitentiary in Auburn. He again started out into the almost impenetrable darkness and had progressed a couple of miles when suddenly from the side of the road darted an unshaven, roughly clothed man, waving his arms frantically and shouting at the Detroit driver. The motorist did what almost anyone else would have done. He "stepped on it" and shot by the stranger. "And I've been wondering ever since who he was and what he wanted," he concluded, in telling the story. "I almost wish I had taken a chance and stopped."—Detroit News.

Farming in Ireland

Of the 3,165,000 population of the Irish Free State about 2,000,000 are engaged in agriculture. There are 354,484 agricultural holdings. The area under crops in 1923 was less by 93,074 acres than in 1922, though greater by 13,000 acres than in pre-war years. There is a decline in the number of sheep, but a big increase in the number of pigs.

New and Artistic Sweaters in Mode

Winsome Models Have Both Practical and Picturesque Value.

Sweaters have become so important a part of a woman's dress that some of the best designers are giving their attention to the creation of new and artistic models. The utility garment, having no claim whatsoever to "looks," has long been in the market, but the comfort and the ease of it and the steadily increasing popularity of sports dress spurred the modistes to develop the possibilities of the sweater in both beauty and style. The result, notes a fashion authority in the New York Times, has been a great variety of models having both practical and picturesque value, and in consequence a broadening of the field in the designing of all forms of the sweater and in its use.

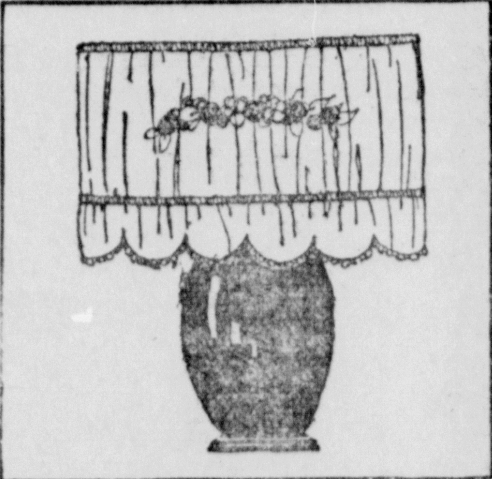

The types of sweater now in vogue are bewildering as to material, form and color. For service at the seashore or the mountains, for cross-country hikes, motoring, yachting and innumerable other purposes there are sweaters of lightweight wool, knitted or woven, or cut from cloth. These employ the most vivid decorative colors, and some of them are swaggers in the extreme, effacing the memory of the first models, seasons past, which were dreary, monotonous things, usually of gray or brown or flannel red. The combining of silk with wool of thisle-down weight in the knitted sweaters is done with success, making them both useful and ornamental, for the wool provides the necessary warmth, and the thread of floss gives a lovely sheen to the surface. A sweater of this sort has the advantage of being more dressy in appearance than one of all wool, and may be worn on more occasions.

Fibre silk has created for the greater number of women a sweater that belongs in the category of silk and looks like silk, and yet may be had for a much lower price than the silk article. The colors in these are of wide range, gay, delicate, dark and black. In this type, as in all of the others, the white sweater is most becoming, and is most suitable for wear with the smart sports skirts of white flannel, ratine, eponge, silk or jersey. The last word in style and beauty is a sweater of crocheted hand-made heavy silk floss. This type was first shown in the tuxedo shape with revers and belt, quite long and coat-like. But gradually this model has been changed, and the one-piece slip-on is the newest and most fashionable. It is popular with the woman of slender figure and straight silhouette.

Curiously enough, while the sweater has become so thoroughly Americanized that we think of it as peculiarly our own, the handsomest of these choicest silk sweaters came to us from England and Ireland. Some, done in fancy stitches with heavy twisted floss of ivory white, are exceedingly beautiful, and are genuine luxuries, being uncommon and costly.

Scalloped Lamp Shade Different From Others

Here is a lamp shade that, simple and elegant, is different from the general run of lamp shades. Cover the frame in the usual manner. Make a four-inch ruffle of plaited silk the color of the lining of the shade. Four inches is a good width for a shade about twelve inches deep. If yours is less make the ruffles less in proportion; if deeper, make it wider. Sew

Simple and Elegant Shade.

It to the lamp. Over it sew a 4-inch ruffle of the top silk. This ruffle can be made double or a single one can be used if the lower edge is picoted. Gather this ruffle slightly before sewing it on. Mark off every four inches. At each mark gather in the ruffle with vertical stitching. This will form the scalloped edge, which gives a petal effect to the shade. Finish the shade with two bands of gold braid trimmed with tiny silk rosebuds.

Fashion Picks Fabrics Regardless of History

No longer is there any hard and fast rule as to the use of materials. Fashion seizes upon anything that suits her fancy and with unbelievable adroitness adapts the fabric to her needs. On one hand she uses velvets and satins for bathing suits, while on the other chintzes and linens, formerly reserved for the sole purpose of being made into hangings and slipcovers, now fashion the most engaging costumes. Little short coats of chintz either quilted or embroidered in black silk are among the most successful models, while one of the most famous designers in Paris has created an evening frock of cretonne which has the design outlined in silver thread and crystal beads.

Mummy of Inca Chief.

A mummy, perfectly preserved, believed to be that of an Inca chief, has been unearthed from a hill in the province of Salta, Argentina, near the Chilean border. A large number of artistic carvings and art objects of stone, copper, earthenware and onyx were buried with it. The nails, teeth and most of the hair are perfectly preserved, as are the vital organs, according to reports, which would indicate a method of embalming that may be superior even to the Egyptian. The methods used to unite the different parts of the implements, also found in the tomb, suggest handwork similar to that of the Egyptians.

Old English Custom
A maiden assize once meant an assize where no criminal was left for execution. Upon such an occasion, the judge was entitled to a pair of white gloves. A modern session of the English court of assize at which no prisoner is tried is known as a maiden assize, and it is customary for the sheriff of the county to present the judge with a pair of white gloves as a symbol of the innocent character of his administration.

SHOULD LEAD WORLD IN PULP WOOD CROP

United States Capable of Producing Own Supply.

Washington.—As in the production of corn crops, the United States can lead the world in the production of timber crops for pulp wood, declares the forest service, United States Department of Agriculture, in its new publication on pulp wood supplies.

This report was prepared in co-operation with the American Paper and Pulp association, and represents the most comprehensive survey of pulp wood resources ever made in this country. It has been printed as a public document and is available for general distribution upon request to the forest service, Washington, D. C.

To understand the paper and pulp situation now confronting the United States, the report says, it is necessary to realize that over 90 per cent of all paper consumed in the United States is made from wood, and that 100 per cent of news-print paper is so made.

The consumption of paper in the United States amounts to 8,000,000 tons a year. It takes over 9,000,000 cords of wood to make this amount. At the present time this nation imports over half its paper supply in the form of finished paper, pulp and wood suitable for making pulp.

But the forest service declares the United States can become independent of foreign countries for its paper supply by, first, growing larger timber crops on forest land; second, by better utilization of forest products; and third, by the expansion of paper-making processes so that more species of timber can be used for pulp wood.

Farmer Biggest Timber Owner.
At the present time, the newly published report states, the United States contains 470,000,000 acres of forest land not needed or taken by agriculture. It is upon these lands that larger timber crops should be grown. The farmer is the largest single class of timber land owners, having about 150,000,000 acres, or one-third, in the form of small woodlots. The potential productivity of this timber land is higher than that of any other which is an important paper-producing nation.

The principal species of timber now used in making paper are spruce, fir, hemlock and poplar. One reason why the United States is forced to import over half its paper supply is because of the centralization of the paper-making industry in the northeast and lake states where large stands of spruce, fir, hemlock and poplar were once available in large quantities. But as these timber stands were also called upon to furnish a large share of the country's lumber supply, they have been drained to such an extent that they no longer can meet increasing demands.

New York ranks first as a paper-producing state, yet gets over half its raw materials from outside. Pennsylvania ranks second, and also has to depend upon outside sources. Wisconsin is the third largest paper-making state, and it, too, is forced to go outside its boundaries for much of its raw materials.

The optimistic note in the report is furnished by the fact that Washington, Oregon, California and Alaska, together with the pine timber in the South, still contain soft-wood forests which can be utilized for paper making if these forests are logged in a wise fashion and protected from the terrible devastation caused by forest fires.

Paper Supply Is Vital.
"To show the vital necessity for this nation to have ample supplies of paper for all time," says a statement from the forest service, "it is only necessary to point out the fact that our per capita consumption is twice that of Great Britain, the next largest paper-consuming nation. Social and economic questions would be involved if this country's supply of paper and paper products were to be curtailed."

"The public has an interest in this problem which it can help solve by legislation looking to the protection of forest land from fire and other forms of devastation, and by continued research into methods of timber growing and utilization."

"The paper and pulp industry should, to safeguard its own interest, assume the leadership in timber growing upon its own forest land and those upon which it is dependent for pulp-wood supplies."

Whistling Saves Wheat Crop
Ephrata, Wash.—George Creel, a farmer's son gifted with the faculty of calling birds by imitating their whistling, saved his father's wheat crop by enticing quail near the habitation. Early in the spring George imitated male quail calling their mates. He continually was answered. Continuing, he induced flocks of them to nest along the irrigation ditches. Throughout the season thus far quail are plentiful in the fields and orchard of this farmer. It is believed the presence of so many of them helped keep away the grasshoppers which have ravaged many nearby sections.

Robin Moves to New York
Waterloo, N. Y.—When a car from the Pennsylvania coal fields arrived here recently a robin was noticed hovering about it, and on the bumpers was found her nest with two eggs in it. It is a certainty that the home was established and the eggs laid before coming here.

NEED SPECIAL LAWS TO PROTECT AIRMEN

Present Statutes Decidedly Unfair to Pilots.

Is an aeronaut legally responsible for the follies of excited spectators who from the ground feast their eyes on his adventure aloft?

The answer is yes, an American court decided more than one hundred years ago.

This precedent, and others of more recent date, were discovered by persons now engaged in the forementioned task of preparing a sorely needed code of laws for the airways. Their researches indicate that under the common law of several nations, every misadventure that befalls a man watching an aeronautical exploit is the fault of the aviator.

Only enactment of special statutes can relieve the airman from this responsibility, the savants say. The historic cases dealt with balloonists, but are believed to apply equally to pilots of modern airships and airplanes.

One Guille, a balloonist, descended into the garden of a man named Swan. He called to a workman in Swan's field to help him. There was a crowd pursuing the balloon to see the landing. The basket of the balloon dragged along Swan's garden, damaging potatoes and radishes. More than 200 of the pursuing spectators broke into the garden, beating down vegetables and flowers.

The damage done by the balloon was about $15, and the damage done by the crowd amounted to about $75. Swan sued Guille for the entire $90, and Guille answered that he was not responsible for the damage done by the crowd.

The New York court that heard the case decided Guille was liable for all the injuries sustained by Swan. It was the natural thing, the court held, for a balloon to draw a crowd, and Guille was wholly to blame. All this happened in 1812.

A similar case happened in Germany, where a balloon landed in a meadow near Frankfurt when the balloonist gave out. The inhabitants of the neighboring village swarmed out to the scene of the accident, and on the way, trampled a garden to ruin. The owner brought suit against the aeronaut for damage to his vegetables, and a court awarded a judgment in his favor.

Now, this aeronaut did not actually trespass on this vegetable dealer's garden. As a matter of fact, he landed in a meadow a long way off. Nevertheless the German court decided that the balloonist did all the damage by drawing a crowd.

A Belgian court has agreed with the American and German courts. While over a small town in Belgium, a balloon began to collapse from loss of gas. The pilot, finding himself forced to land, selected an open space beyond the town.

He was flying just above the roofs of the house, with his drag rope dangling into the street. The villagers, believing the balloonist wished to be drawn down, seized the rope.

The aeronaut cried out to them to let go the rope, but the villagers interpreted his yells as cries for help, and they vigorously and heroically pulled the balloon to the ground.

The pilot was forced to open his valve to release the gas swiftly. In the second story window of a house on a narrow street sat a man who was smoking a cigarette. The cigarette ignited the escaping gas as the balloon settled beside the house, and there was an explosion.

Considerable property was destroyed, several people were killed and many were injured. Although the aeronaut swore he was virtually kidnapped from the air, and explained that the catastrophe was caused entirely by the folly of ignorant villagers, a Belgian court condemned him to pay all the damages.

Shortcomings

Moses Diggs, an old Negro, had been arrested for having more than one wife.

"How many wives have you had?" demanded the judge.

"Six," was the reply.

"Why couldn't you get on with them?"

"Well, suh, de fust two spilled de white folks' clo's when dey washed em; de thud' worn't no cook; de fo'th was jest nacherally lazy; and de fifth—I'll tell you, judge, de fifth, she—"

"Incomparability?"

"No," said the Negro, slowly, "it won't nothin' like dat. Yo' jest couldn't git on with her onless yo' was somewhars else."—London Tit-Bits.

Why Urchins Leave Home

The principal reason why children run away are hurt feelings, desire to be alone, rebellion against authority, boredom, love of adventure and desire to see the world, says Mrs. Mary E. Hamilton, New York's first police-woman.

Bass Drummer Kept Time as He Won $1,000

By GEORGE ELMER COBB

(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

BOOM-boom-boom-boom! Stridently out upon the air the measured beat of a big bass drum. Stalwart, free-armed, Jed Hawkins stood at his task as resolutely as a maestro at the baton stand.

Before him, propped in a low tree crotch, was a homemade sheet of music, its sparse notes big as eggs. This was his "score."

Over the neighboring fence old Seth Brown protruded his broad tanned face, set all in a capacious grin.

"What ye think yer doin', Jed?" he propounded.

"Practicing," was the terse, serious reply.

"You call that music!" derided Brown.

"'Twill be, when it mixes in with the rest of the band."

"What band?"

"The village band—I've joined it. There's just as much system to a drum as there is to a flute."

Seth Brown went on his way, chuckling. He had a poor opinion of Jed Hawkins. In the first place, his pretty daughter, Nellie, liked Jed. In the next place, she had her pick of several richer swains.

"I'll admit Jed is stiddy," ruminated the practical old man, "but he's slow and poky."

"Slow but sure," was the way Nellie put it to herself. "Dear fellow! I'll wait fifty years for him, if I have to."

"A little extra money—everything counts," reflected patient, honest Jed. "The band gets four dollars a head an evening for playing at dances. Next winter it will be three times a week—" boom-boom-boom-boom! and Jed proceeded industriously to beat out the notes of his score.

"Well, dear," Nellie challenged him, and he turned to face his loyal sweetheart, bright-faced and cheery as usual—"how are you getting on?"

"I can play the whacks where they're marked to come in," explained Jed.

Nellie carried the town newspaper in her hand. This she opened and held it before the face of her lover, her dainty forefinger indicating a great black type advertisement.

"Look, dear," she directed, and Jed read it in his slow, accurate way.

"A thousand dollars reward," he said. "I'd find the child for nothing, if I could. Poor little tot! No clue, eh?"

"No," replied Nellie; "the paper says that Ida Strong has been kidnapped and probably carried to a distance. Her parents are frantic. Their only hope that, once they get safely in hiding, those who stole her will offer her $10,000 ransom."

"When is your first band playing?" asked Nellie, changing the subject.

"Saturday night. It isn't a very select dance, or I'd ask you to go. It's over at Jung's Corners. They're a rough lot around there, you know. Their shindigs generally break up in a row."

A great clumsy carryall conveyed the rural band over to Jung's Corners on Saturday evening.

When the last number was played they stored their instruments and accepted the invitation to supper from the proprietor of the place.

Jed was the first of the party to go after his instrument. When he got into the poorly-lighted storeroom he rolled his bulky drum near the door. A thin, piping wall proceeded from beyond a door in one corner of the room. Jed unsled the bolt.

"Gracious me!" he ejaculated, and well he might. In a wretched adjoining apartment a little child lay sobbing on a pallet.

"Ida Strong!" gasped Jed, and then he advanced towards the child. The light from the dancing hall permeated the room. "Don't you know me, Ida?"

"Oh, yes, sure I do!" palpitated the little one, putting up her thin, wavering hands. "Oh, Mr. Hawkins! Please take me away from here. I've been locked up for a week, and I heard them say they were going to take me farther from home tomorrow."

"Do just as I tell you," whispered Jed, an exciting thought coming into his mind.

As the cornet player appeared and took up his instrument Jed sang out: "Help me get this clumsy old baggage of mine into the wagon, will you? Go easy—that's it," and he gave a great breath of relief as the big drum was hoisted aboard the carryall.

As the horses reached the top of the last hill overlooking the home town he pulled the drum towards him. He unstrung its great moon-faced top.

"All right, little one!" he hailed, and the child he had secreted in the big, roomy drum put out her arms and climbed into his lap.

His companions in the carryall stared at child and man in open-mouthed wonder. Their eyes goggled as he told of his unique plan to rescue her.

"You see, some of that lawless gang down at the Corners had her hidden away in Jung's place," explained Jed. "And you get a thousand dollars!"

"And you get a thousand dollars!" shouted the leader of the band.

"Yes, the reward is yours," chorused half a dozen voices.

"Not so slow and poky, after all," commented Farmer Brown, when he came to know that Jed Hawkins had fairly won the price of a home for his pretty daughter, Nellie.

Will Not Destroy External Parasites

No Preparation Effective in Food or Drinking Water.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

So far as is known by any of the scientists of the United States Department of Agriculture who have been testing the claims of certain manufacturers of lice, mite and blue-bug preparations, there is no preparation made that can be fed to poultry in the food or drinking water that will kill external pests or parasites. There are being advertised and continuously offered to the poultrymen numerous misbranded preparations for use in this way by manufacturers who are either entirely ignorant of the physiology of a chicken or grossly unscrupulous. These preparations are sold for the most part directly to consumers by parcel post.

Most of the products so advertised are composed of various combinations of such chemicals as sulphur, charcoal, calcium sulphide, capsicum, sodium carbonate, naphthalene, sand, nux vomica, calcium polymephid, and other ingredients. The insecticide and fungicide board has recently made tests of a number of these mixtures and reports that in no single instance has one been found to give the effect claimed for it. The board further states that it is of the opinion that it is unlikely that any substance will be found which will control or kill external parasites of chickens when fed in the feed or drinking water.

Tests have not been made of all of the substances advertised against all of the insects named, but it is believed that sufficient evidence has been obtained to prove the extreme unlikelihood of the method of controlling external pests by internal administration of an insecticide.

Potato Growers Should Have Seed Plot Yearly

Every commercial potato grower should get into the habit of growing a seed plot every year. Now is the time to select the seed for this plot. If the seed potatoes are to be taken out of the general field, only uniform tubers from good yielding hills should be selected by hand before the general digging starts. The seed plot tubers so selected should be put away in barrels or crates and stored in a cool, well ventilated place so that the potatoes will be in the best possible condition next spring. Enough potatoes should be selected to grow a plot large enough to supply all of the necessary seed potatoes for both the plot and the field the following year.

Every grower who has had a seed plot properly taken care of will follow this procedure and will then dig the remainder of his plot to be used as seed stock for the general field.

A yearly potato seed plot furnishes an easy and efficient method of obtaining good seed stock, keeping it free from such diseases as black leg, Fusarium wilt and Rhizoctonia, and increasing the yield and quality of the general crop.—A. G. Tolaas, chief inspector of the Minnesota potato seed certification board.

Butterfat Test of Jersey

According to a large number of analyses at the different experiment stations in the country the average butterfat test of the Jersey is about 5.35 per cent. Of course, there is a wide variation in different individuals but to be representative of the breed this cow ought to test at least that much. Feed has very little, if any, influence on the butterfat content of the milk.

FARM NOTES

Bacteria on legumes work for nothing and even pay for the privilege.

A peach tree affected with yellows should be destroyed before other trees become infected.

A good way to use summer spare time is to go on some "see and learn" tours to find out how other people do it.

A garden is a beautiful book, writ by the fingers of God; every flower and every leaf is a letter.—Douglas Jerrold.

Litter from the poultry house will make good fertilizer. This is a point to remember when cleaning out the poultry house.

A fair-share farm lease is one in which each party contributes to the expenses in the same proportion as he shares in the proceeds.

The true test of civilization is not the census, nor the size of cities, nor crops; no, but the kind of man the country turns out.—Emerson.

If grain prices are to be high this fall, cattle and sheep feeders should select "feeders" capable of consuming rations composed more largely of low-priced roughages, with less grain, than for the last two years.

Physical strength and endurance, knowledge, ingenuity, cleverness, sound reasoning, a good memory, patience, courage, honesty, thrift, friendliness, and love of home, are some of the requirements for complete success as a farmer.

DIZZY HEIGHTS

F. D. Kraft Made Five Trips to Summit of Mountain Peaks.

F. D. Kraft, a former resident of this county, left here about ten years ago for the benefit of his health and located with his family in Longmont, Colorado. He is much improved, enjoying climbing the mountains.

He has made his fifth trip to the summit of high peaks on the Continental Divide in the Rocky Mountains, climbing to the top of Long's Peak, which is one of the highest and most difficult peaks to climb, being higher than the famous Pike's Peak. This trip was made August 9, of this year. Long's Peak has a great square head towering above everything else in the Rocky Mountain National park.

It is a real, architectural structure like an enormous column of solid rock buttressed up on all four sides with long rock ledges. On the east side a precipice of 2000 feet drops sheer from the summit into the wildest lake that one can possibly imagine. There is only one month in the year when its surface is not, partially at least frozen.

The altitude of Long's Peak is 14,255 feet above the sea level. The summit of the peak is six and one-half miles from the end of the auto road. In the six and one-half miles, an ascent has to be made of between 5,500 and 6,000 feet. On the way to the top, the party, of which Mr. Kraft was a member, experienced the novelty of encountering a snowstorm. Just before the last steep ascent up an almost perpendicular wall of nearly 1000 feet, the guide gave particular instructions as to the method of ascent. It took two and a half hours to make this last climb.

From the top of the peak they had the privilege of viewing, from 3000 feet above, the clouds that Longmont was enjoying from below, which greatly resembled the waves of the ocean as far as vision would allow. The tops of lower mountains projecting above the clouds resembled islands in the ocean. While it was a hazardous and tiresome trip, the climbers felt well rewarded for their efforts by the wonderful experience and beautiful scenery.

Mr. Kraft is a brother of Harry D. Kraft, of this city, and is a son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Dresbach of Pickaway township.

Smoke Screen a Menace

The smoke screen, long used as a protective device for battleships, now becomes a menace to them, according to authorities of the United air service. A screen spread above a fleet of battleships by special smoke-emitters attached to the approach of the aerial bomb fleet to be observed. This enables the attacking planes to fly low, when, with sensitive finders, they pick up the doomed battleship by sound, adjust their aim and loose the bomb in safety except for the possibility of a chance shot fired blindly against the pall of smoke by the anti-aircraft guns on the ship below.

It is a strange thing to find the screen employed as a weapon of offense against the very craft which originally produced it as a defensive measure.
